SPRING 2026

Landes Terrace: 14 Homes for 14 Families

Construction is underway at Landes Terrace. Foundations are in place, walls are rising, and the outlines of a new neighborhood are becoming visible. This progress reflects careful planning, skilled work, and the steady support of this community.

Built in the paired-home style, Landes Terrace is a thoughtfully designed 14-home neighborhood in Port Townsend, furthering our mission to create permanently affordable and community-oriented housing.

This neighborhood is more than a collection of homes: it's a place where families will grow, friendships will form, and community will thrive. With every trench dug, every path laid, and every home framed, we're building not just housing, but a future rooted in dignity, stability, and opportunity.

Expanding the path to homeownership in East Jefferson County

The Mason Street Neighborhood

This fall, Habitat will break ground on the Mason Street neighborhood in Port Hadlock. This next phase of work builds on what we are learning at Landes Terrace and reflects our continued commitment to creating stable, affordable housing in East Jefferson County.

Mason Street is planned as a neighborhood of 138 homes, designed with shared open spaces and a layout that encourages connection, walkability, and a strong sense of community. Located near the school, the library, and other everyday services, the neighborhood is intended to support families in staying rooted in the place they live and work.

Like all Habitat homes, Mason Street will be built in partnership with future homeowners and designed to remain affordable for generations. This work reflects a long-term approach to addressing housing needs in our community, carried forward with care and intention.

Apply for a Home Now

We're seeking homebuyers! Now is the time to apply for Landes Terrace and Mason Street.

Habitat homes are sold with an affordable mortgage, with monthly payments designed not to exceed one-third of a household's income.

A Letter from our Executive Director

Built on trust, sustained over time

Dear friends,

The most meaningful commitments are rarely loud.

They're often made over time, without ceremony, by people who simply choose to keep showing up. I was reminded of that recently at the dedication of our 75th Habitat home, when a longtime supporter, Beth, stepped forward to place the keys into a family's hands. She has walked closely with us, trusting that housing stability changes the course of a family's future, and trusting us to build with care.

Standing there with her, I felt deep gratitude for her trust, and a quiet awe at how the trust of this community has sustained this work year after year.

Moments like that remind me why I am so deeply grateful for this community. This work continues because you continue to support us. Because of that commitment, the homes we have built continue to offer stability and possibility to families in our community.

This spring, we are asking for your support as we build 14 Homes for 14 Families at Landes Terrace, our 14-home neighborhood currently under construction in Port Townsend. Your contributions help cover the gap between what it costs to build these homes and what an affordable mortgage can support. Community support makes it possible to complete Landes Terrace and prepare for groundbreaking at the Mason Street neighborhood this fall.

As I look ahead to Mason Street, I do so with quiet confidence. Not because the need is small, but because this community has shown what is possible when commitments endure and values remain steady. The work continues, and more work lies ahead, grounded in the same trust that brought us here.

Thank you for being part of this work.

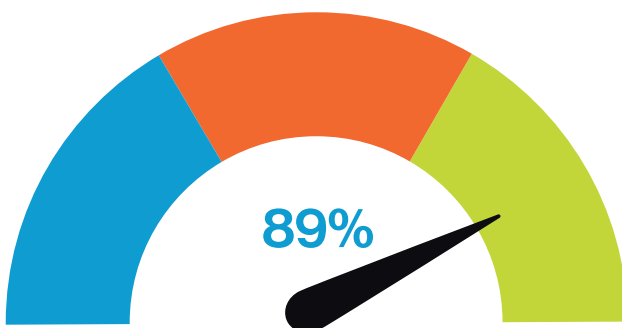

In partnership,
